MONTREAL, Aug. 31.—"I shall do the decent thing. I shall stand by my party whether anyone else wants to submerge it or not!" declared Hon. Robert Rogers today, when asked what stand he would take, in the event of a general election.

Mr. Rogers, who is registered at the Hotel Carlton, was interviewed with regard to his resignation from the government. "In what way," Mr. Rogers was asked, "do you consider that the government has shown inconsistency and indecision?"

"Oh, along general lines," was the reply.

"Correspondence which passed between the prime minister and myself will be tabled in the house," Mr. Rogers went on, "and that will give in detail my reasons for resigning. I do not wish to anticipate the tabling of the correspondence, but I will say this, Sir Robert Borden thinks that the fortunes of the country should no longer be entrusted to the Tory party I differ from him. That is the bulseye of the whole thing."

"Then you do not think that the suggested union government will be successful?"

"I don't think that coalition government would be any good," Mr. Rogers replied. "So long as the recognized leaders of the opposition remain outside."

"Does your resignation have any reference to delays in putting conscription into force, as has been suggested?"

"As to that," Mr. Rogers responded, "with a smile, 'If we need the men so badly, three months is a long time to wait.'"

FIREMEN DOUBLE ASSET TO CITY; REPAIR STATION IN SPARE TIME

Improvements totalling approximately $2,000 have been added to Edmonton's fire hall, No. 1, on 98th street, during the past few weeks by the sixteen men on the staff of this station.

Recently the roof of the building started to collapse. By the time the ceiling over the engines and trucks had sagged several inches it was found that something had to be done and done quickly. Unfortunately the city's finances would not permit of the extensive improvements which were badly needed to be done. The council has been asked to set aside a state of emergency, which would allow a state of disaster. Built in 1925 on the le-

FOOD CONTROLLER IS OBEYED HERE

Edmonton Hotels and Cafes
Observing "Beefless" and

"Baconless" Day.
Local hotels and cafes observed Tuesday as a "baconless" and "beefless" day and at least one hotel and two restaurants declined to serve meat at all.
These places of business have exceded even the fondest hopes of the food controller. This is indeed a mealless day with the houses in question although one establishment has permitted "Roast Alberta Turkey and Dressing" to appear on its menu.

ber of eating establishments elicited the information that no copies of the Canada Gazette had yet arrived in the city containing the exact provisions of the new order in council. The point the restaurant men are anxious about is whether the law provides any stipulated meal in each day as the one in which meat may be served or whether this is left to the proprietors to decide. Should the latter be the case it is agreed that the noon meal will be the one chosen for the serving of meat.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1917

The substance of Hon. Robert Rogers' letter is that he does not think Sir Robert Borden is good enough politician for him to serve under any longer.

Mr. Rogers does not question that Sir Robert Borden is playing politics with the war to the absolute limit of his ability. He only doubts that he is playing well enough to win.

Mr. Rogers seems to cling to the delusion that Sir Robert Borden is trying to pull the party through the elections. He has another thought coming. Sir Robert gave that up long ago as a hopeless job. It is himself he is trying to save with his proposals for a coalition government. What becomes of the party is beyond him. If it was the party he was worrying about he would have made way for Sir Thomas White long ago.

Most Conservative papers do not seem to be satisfied with what the Liberals did at the Winnipeg convention. Then how would it be for the dissatisfied gentlemen to start a demand for a convention of the Conservative-Nationalist party at this juncture, and show us what a real win-the-war program looks like? From what Mr. Rogers says it is needed, and the proceedings could hardly fail to arouse interest and clarify the atmosphere.

Canada is being flooded with war money. The flood will stop when the war stops. The more of the war cost we pay with this war money, the less of it we will have to carry through the future years as a war debt. An undue proportion of this war money is being drained into private bank accounts by profiteering of munitions and food. The income tax should be made large enough to recover it.

Public opinion forced the Government to impose a tax on excess profits a year and a half ago. Public opinion has now forced the Government to impose a tax on excess incomes. But it is announced that where the income tax is collected the excess profits tax is to be excoised. The profiteer is thus allowed to escape the measure that was supposed to be aimed directly at him.

The C. N. R. and G. T. P. railway systems were built in advance of the needs of the country, to allow settlement and development. The C. P. R. was built in advance of the needs of the country, for a similar purpose. With less than one-fifth the prairie under cultivation the C. P. R. has become a magnificent financial success. With the settlement and development of the remaining four-fifths of the prairie country the C. N. R. and G. T. P., under equally good management, would become equally successful financially. Unfortunately, about the time these two systems were completed the war put an end for the time to the influx of people and the spread of settlement. One way or another the two roads have to be carried through the period of arrested development. Hitherto they have been carried by advances from the Dominion treasury. In return for the money loaned the country has got the benefit of railway competition, while the enterprises have been the security for the risk. The same end could have been secured by continuing the loan policy. This has been done in the case of the G. T. P. But in the case of the C. N. R. a deal has been arranged by which the public will have to pay the promoters anything up to sixty million dollars for stock, assume hundreds of millions of liabilities, and then either lease the system for what can be got or undertake the doubtful policy of operating it as a Government concern. Why the departure in this case from the established policy, and the policy continued in the case of the G. T. P.?

Many who cannot personally serve can save; and many who cannot save with living at its present cost can serve in some way or other.

If the conservation of the meat supply is so needful as to call for the curtailment of consumption by official regulation, the way to accomplish that is to adopt the system of issuing meat tickets entitling the holders to purchase a stipulated quantity per week. The saving effected by making speeches and by regulations which reach only to public eating houses will be neither as large as it might be nor as uniform as it ought to be if Governmental interference is called for.

It is significant that none of his newspaper friends take seriously the suggestion that Hon. Robert Rogers quit the Government because he was dissatisfied with the delay of conscription, or that he quit voluntarily for any reason. They appear to be unanimous in the view that he was thrust out, as a necessary preliminary to the reorganization of the cabinet. The repudiation of the Nationalists and the dismissal of Mr. Rogers, they claim, were things which had to be done if any Liberals conspicuous enough to be useful were to be got to join the Government.

This is high praise for the Liberals who are supposed to have stood out on the conditions. Whether by the sacrifice of his old associates Sir Robert Borden can thus succeed in saving himself remains to be seen. That the supposed break with Messrs. Bourassa and Rogers is intended to leave the Premier less liable to censure is not to be doubted. It may enable him to fortify his position by introducing some new elements into the Government. Whether they will be strong enough to carry him through the elections is another matter. Sir Robert has demonstrated as no predecessor ever did that he is not competent to direct a Government in peace or in war. To persuade the public that he could direct another Government more successfully and creditably than he has done the present one would be no easy task under any circumstances. It will not be made easier by his delay in undertaking the supposed purging of his political affiliations until it could be delayed no longer. So long as Messrs. Bourassa and Rogers were elements of strength Sir Robert stood by them, in defiance of the gathering storm. Only when he had to choose between them and certain defeat he seeks to dissociate himself from them. Such death-bed repentance is not convincing of either the sincerity or strength of character that are first necessities in the make-up of a national leader for times of stress. It is dictated by political expediency, and by that alone.

The conclusion is necessary that the supposed repudiation of these unpopular associates is more apparent than real, and that both Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Rogers have an understanding on the quiet that if they help to defeat those who oppose Sir Robert's plans to continue his incompetent direction of public affairs they will be duly rewarded for their services once he is again freed of the embarrassing situation which obliges him for the time to profess to disown them.

"I wish to see a bonnet," said Miss Passee, aged 40.
"For your hat, miss?" enquired the French milliner.

The Volunteer From The North

He heard the cry in the chilly North For valiant men to rally forth. To the battlefield, or air, or sea, To fight for the right and to keep men free.

He walked not for the second call, But packed his grip with his little all And hitched each faithful mameuluke To the sledges that must follow the lonely route.

He left his cabin by the stream, Where he'd sought for gold—it had been his dream. And took the trail that dogs alone Can navigate in that frozen zone; He travelled south o'er the mountain pass.

He travelled the lakes over ice like glass, He travelled by day, he travelled by night To bear a hand in the desperate fight. He crossed the rivers chilled with frost, Where many a traveller had been lost; He crossed the lands that men call "Bad."

And thanked the Lord he was warmly clad; He carried no carpet of needles or pins, And halted there awhile to dine; But all the time he thought of the flag, And he, for one, was not going to lag.

Then on and on over depths of snow, (The mercury showed eighteen below) The faithful dogs kept up their pace; With Father Time they were running a race.

Till their master saw, far far away, A city's towers beside a bay. So he left his team in the care of a friend, Right glad to have come to his journey's end.

His journey's end? Not yet. His mind was bent On the end in view, so next he went And signed, and swore to serve the King. He heard the pipes and bugles ring; The doctors had no fault to find With his stalwart frame, his eyes, his mind; Behold him then with martial glee Aboard a ship on the bounding sea!

The pirate U-boats failed to get This gallant man with high purpose set. He landed safe on Europe's soil, Quite ready to fight, or die, or toll, To rise or to fall as his lot might be; This gallant man from over the sea Watch over him ye angels fair! And guard his head from danger's snare. For among the hosts that have sailed forth, There are none to excel this man from the North.

PHYSICIAN WAS SLAIN IN BRAWL

POLICE NOW SAY

Evidence Shows Several Prominent Men of Hamilton Were in Drunken Row.

HAMILTON, Aug. 21.—A later theory of the police in connection with the mysterious death of Dr. D. C. Macrobrie, well-known Hamilton physician, who was found dead on the premises of the Crescent Oil Company Sunday night, is that he was the victim of a brawl. That Harry Smith, manager of the Crescent Company, who was charged with the death of Macrobrie, real estate man, who was in the room when Macrobrie died, was the doctor's enemy, was the theory of the police. They were sleeping so soundly that Macrobrie made no attempt to arouse them. The post-mortem, it is claimed, revealed that Macrobrie also had considerable liquor in his stomach.

Macrobrie's black eye indicates that he was struck in the face and that he was fighting with a man with a terrible force, striking his head against the iron basket found under the body, fracturing his skull. The police believe that Macrobrie was higher up on the wall by the belief that the dying man, whose right hand was soaked with blood from the wound in the head, was trying to get to the top of the wall. With his left hand he tried to loosen his collar, gouging a piece of flesh out of his neck in the process. The small piece of flesh was found under his thumb nail. The police claimed today that they have a woman witness residing within a short distance from the scene of the tragedy, who claims that she heard calls for help on the night in question.

MOUNTFIELD BOYS WIN GOLF EVENT

Return Best Net And Gross Scores In Handicap Competition.

Ten boys competed in the medal play handicap competition at the public links yesterday. The youngsters slugged away at the ball with great vigor and enthusiasm. Some of them gave promise of developing a good game, although the long distances handicapped their youthful strength.

James Mountfield, with a handicap of 14, returned a net score of 113 and won the event. Harry Mountfield, at scratch, had the best gross card, namely, 114. The other competitors were: Fred Shaw, Cecil Case, Eric Oakshott, Tom Ellis, Arthur Sutcliffe, R. Mays, A. Langton and W. Lamb.

CAPITALS KICK AT RULING AND STOP

The game between the Capitals and the Great West Garment team last evening at Diamond Park ended abruptly in the fourth inning. The umpire gave a decision to which the Capitals took exception and instantly stopped playing. The score then stood 4 to 1 in their favor.

Adventures of Uncle Wiggily

By Howard R. Goss

Uncle Wiggily and Billie's Rubbers

Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"Tap! Tap! Tap!" came knocks on the door of the hollow stump bungalow where Uncle Wiggily Longears, the rabbit gentleman, lived.

"I wonder who it can be?" said Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, the muskrat lady housekeeper.

"I'm going to open and find out," spoke the bunny.

"Better not," whispered Nurse Jane. "It may be the fuzzy fox, or the skulky-sculky alligator. They haven't bothered you yet this week, and it's just like them to start in now."

"Nonsense!" playfully said Uncle Wiggily. "I'm not afraid!"

So he opened the door and there stood Billie Bushytail, the squirrel brother of Johnnie Canuck.

"Hello!" said Uncle Wiggily, pleasant like and cheerfully.

"Hello," responded Billie, who is the same thing as said, or answered, "I came over to see if you would take me for a walk, so we might have an adventure with lollypop umbrellas, the way you and Johnnie did yesterday."

"Oh! my dear little squirrel chap; I'm sorry, but I can't go now," said Mr. Longears. "I have to go over and see Grandfather Goosey Gander, who wants to play checkers with me. When I come back I'll look for you on an adventure with you. But here is a penny for you to buy a lollypop, and you may turn it into an umbrella, or even a pair of rubber boots if you like."

"Thank you!" said Billie as he scampered away through the woods with his penny.

Uncle Wiggily started to get ready to go see Grandpa Goosey, but before the rabbit gentleman could leave his bungalow, back came running Billie the squirrel boy, and his jaws were moving up and down very fast indeed.

"Are you eating your lollypop?" asked the bunny gentleman.

"I didn't buy any," answered the squirrel boy. "I bought chewing gum. I'll give you some, only you don't get much for a penny, and I'm using it all myself. It's awful nice and stretchy, and he pulled some from his mouth on his paw to show Mr. Longears."

"Oh, that isn't nice to do!" said Uncle Wiggily. "I don't like chewing gum, anyhow, as it gets in my hollow tooth. Of course, if you have such strong nut-cracking teeth, but not for me. I have no use for gum!"

"Still it is very useful," answered Billie, sneaking something like a book. "Once I stuck a postage stamp on a letter with some gum when the regular stamp-sticky stuff was washed off in the rain."

"Oh! yes, chewing gum may be all right in some places," Uncle Wiggily said. "But I don't like it. Anyhow, I must go now to see Grandpa Goosey."

"Mayn't I come?" begged Billie.

"I think it's going to rain," said Uncle Wiggily. "And I'm going to take my rubbers and not a lollypop this time. You haven't either, Billie."

"I'll run home and get my rubbers," said the squirrel boy, "and I can walk under your umbrella."

"All right—come on," said kind Uncle Wiggily.

So when Billie came back with his rubbers in his pocket, for it was not yet raining, he and the bunny rabbit gentleman started for Grandpa Goosey Gander's house.

"They had not gone very far before it suddenly began to rain. My! How the drops did pelt down, but Uncle Wiggily only laughed.

"It's just like I for rain?" he asked, as he looked at the one and put on the other. "Billie also put on his rubbers, but he was so soaked that he had to wipe his face with his hand."

"Oh, dear! Ouch!"

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"My rubbers are full of holes!" chattered the squirrel boy. "I must have picked up my old ones, instead of my new ones, in my hurry. Oh, my feet are getting all wet!"

"Hal! That's too bad!" said Uncle Wiggily. "Now I shall have to take you home under my umbrella. I can go on to Grandpa Gander's house. I'm sorry, Billie!"

"So am I," said Billie. "But really, you won't have to go back with me, Uncle Wiggily."

"Why not? I can't have you walking along with your rubbers full of holes. That's worse than going barefoot!"

"Oh, I'll mend the holes in my rubbers," chattered Billie.

"How?" asked the bunny rabbit.

"With my sticky chewing gum, which will keep out the rain," answered the squirrel boy. So he stopped up the holes in his overshoes with the gum, and then he could scamper on with Uncle Wiggily as well as if he had new rubbers.

"Well, gum is more useful than I thought," said the bunny rabbit. "And if the ocean breeze doesn't blow the boardwalk over into the salt water taffy and make it all sticky, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the bear's tongue."

Today We Celebrate

Anniversary of the Red Cross

Fifty-three years ago today the representatives of twelve great nations assembled in Geneva, Switzerland, which brought into existence one of the greatest humanitarian agencies the world has ever known, the Red Cross Society. This international society for the relief of the wounded in war, for the relief of the distressed, for the relief of the suffering, was inspired by a book, "Un Souvenir de Solferino," written by a Swiss gentleman, Henri Dunant. He had witnessed the horrors of the battle of Solferino in 1859, and his book made such a profound impression that in 1863 there was a meeting of delegates from fourteen nations to consider a plan for the formation of a relief society. Great Britain, France, Russia, Prussia, Italy and Austria were represented, and it was agreed that another meeting should be held in 1864 to complete the organization. The congress was convened in Geneva early in August, and on the 22nd of that month an international committee received the signature of twelve delegates. The soldiers enlisted under the Red Cross, soldiers of mercy, received their baptism of fire in the war between France and Germany in 1870, when the flag of the society was recognized as neutral.

For many years the United States held aloof from the movement, but in 1882, through the efforts of Clara Barton, the Washington government became a party to the treaty. The American Red Cross has performed wonders in the amelioration of suffering, not only in war, but in pestilence, famine, flood and fire. It has reached the height of its glory in the present war, for from the very outbreak of the war in 1914 it has performed its work of mercy in every land on the globe. In 1905 the American Red Cross was organized on a broader basis, with William H. Taft, then secretary of war, as its president. In this connection the former president was made a major general on the other day. For Mr. Taft is still head of the American Red Cross.

The insignia of the Society, a red cross on a white background, was chosen as a compliment to the Swiss government, whose flag is a white cross on a red background. The original treaty of half a century ago insured to the Red Cross the protection of all conflicting forces in time of war, and covered all suffering caused by war. The treaty provided that the hospital flag of the Red Cross be that of the society, although Turkey was permitted to adopt the red crescent as its emblem. By the articles of the treaty a sick or wounded soldier is a "neutral case."

Anniversary of Pioneer Almanac

Prof. Samuel Pierpont Langley, the first man to solve the problem of heavier-than-air flying machines, was born at Roxbury, Mass., 83 years ago today. While he did not succeed in perfecting a machine that would fly, he did establish the principle upon which flight depends and demonstrated the possibility of mechanical flight. Broken-hearted by the ridiculous, he died in 1906, and shortly afterwards others reaped the fruits of his long labors and tireless industry. Prof. Langley was a physician and astronomer of wide repute, and was secretary of the Smithsonian institute at Washington from 1887 until his death. He began his inquiries into the problems of aviation about 1890, and in 1893 completed a machine, which failed because the wings were not strong enough to bear the pressure to which they were subjected. In 1896, however, another trial of the "aerodrome" was made, and it twice sustained itself in the air for a minute and a half, and was a full success. It had been supplied with fuel.
